The Concept

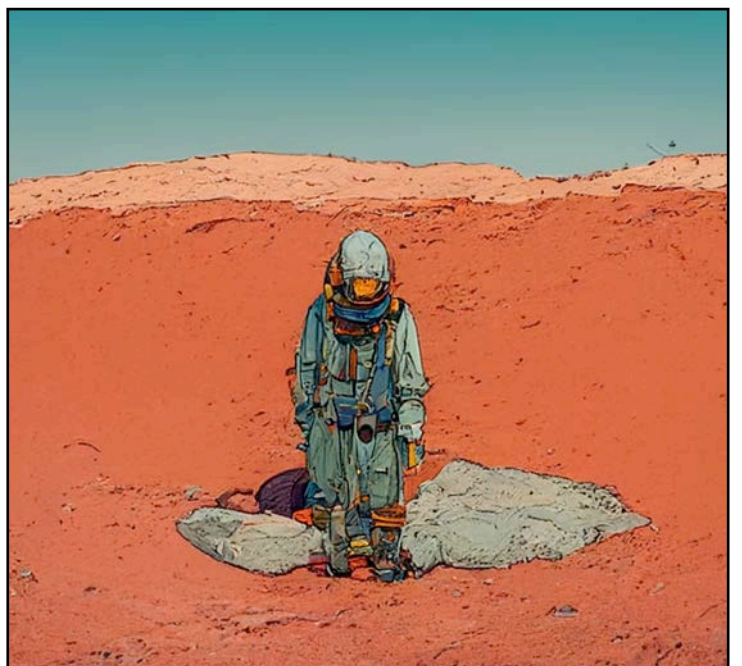

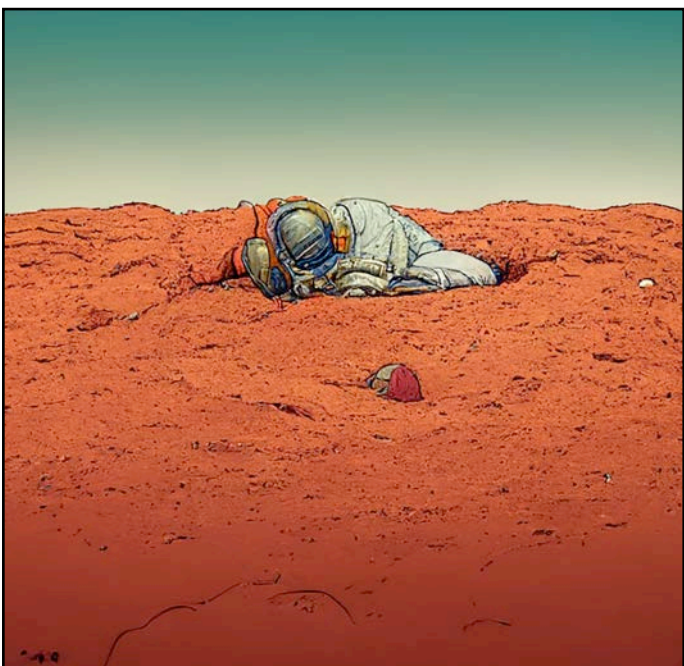

The Sky is full of Chaos is a synthetic art experiment I ran during the weekend. Being a tech-savvy artist, I think you must be open to experimentation. I wanted to see if I could create a comic full of congruent images using only Midjourney ai in two days and almost no post-editing. The final result takes me between 6-8 hours in total. The art prompts used to generate the images are what I have in mind when creating organic art.

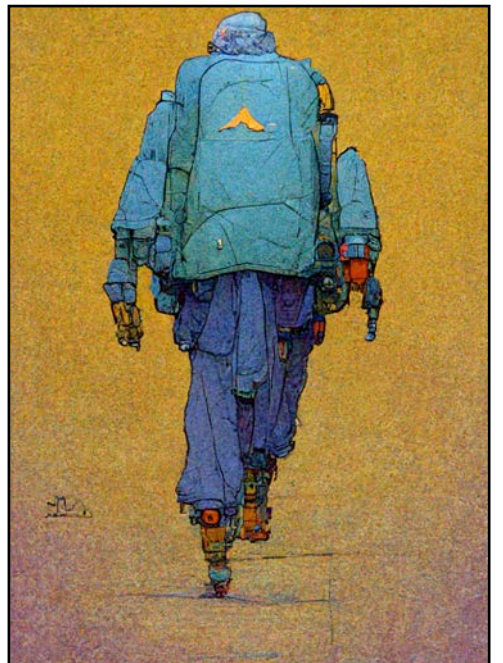

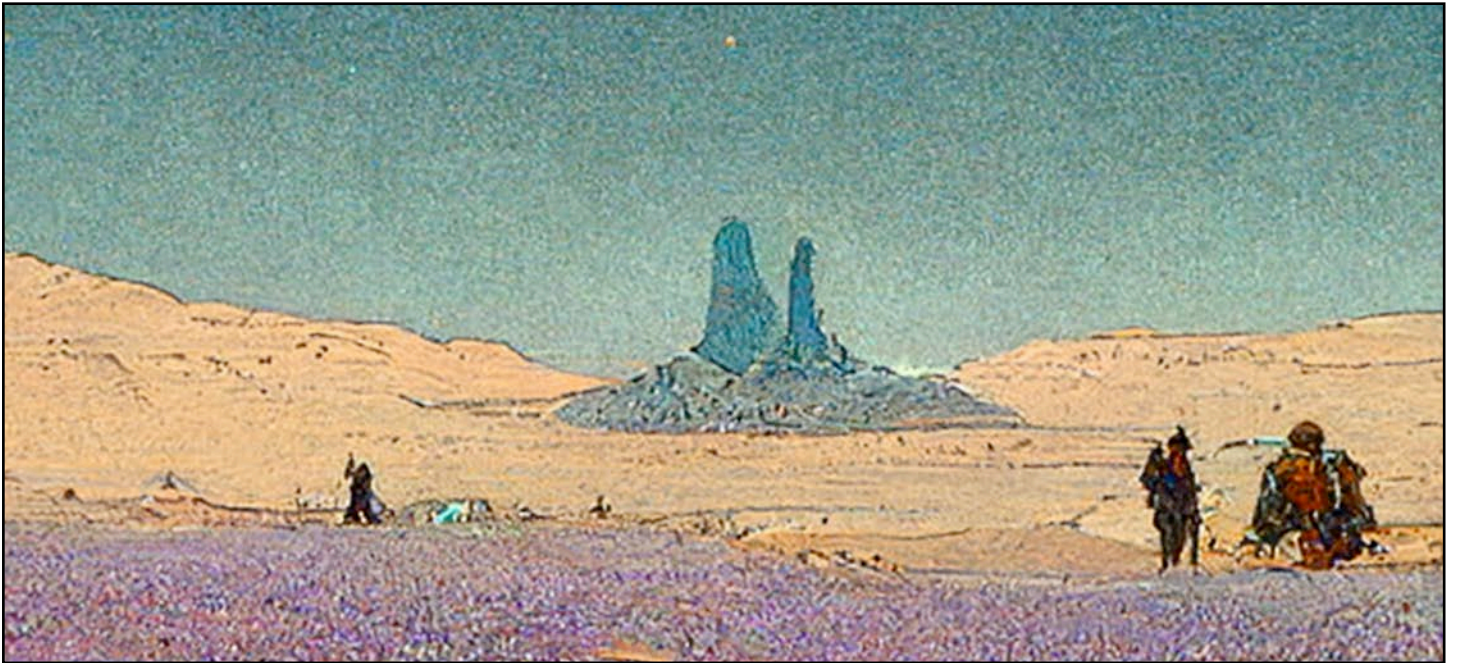

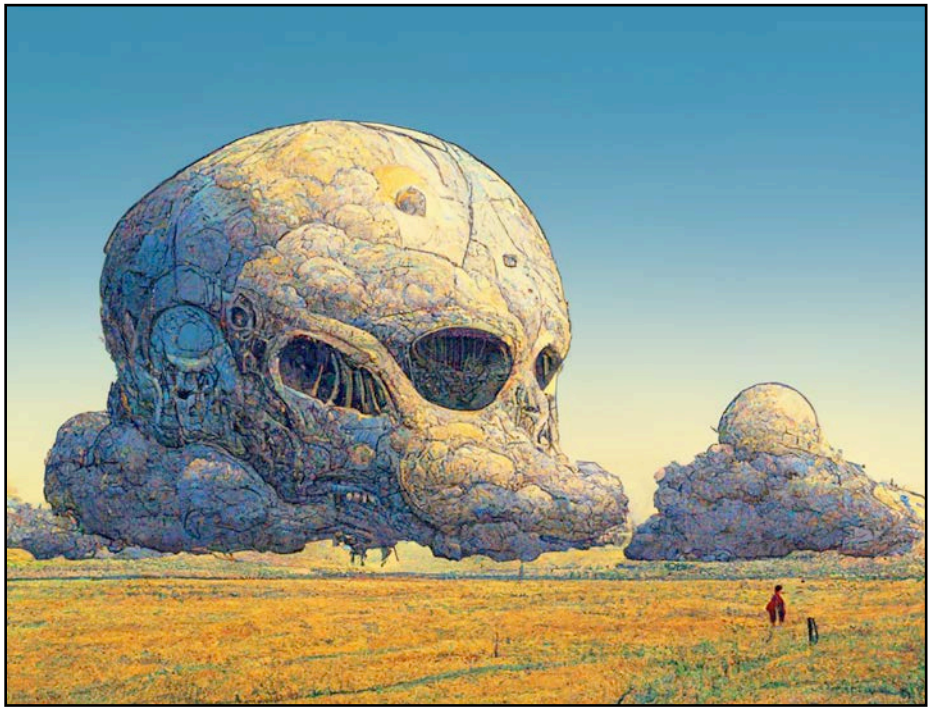

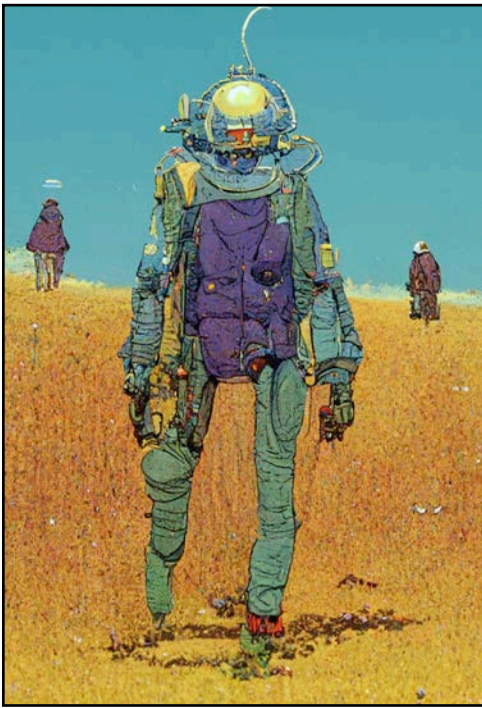

If I had not put the limitation of time and tools, the final result would have been indistinguishable from an organic artwork. All this leaves me with this question: What will be an emerging artist's role in a few years when this technology is more advanced?
